

REDMOND HURTING ASQUITH

STRONG REACTION AGAINST THE LIBERAL MINISTRY.

No Hope for Them in Next Election—Earl Grey's Federation Plan Supplementing Home Rule—O'Brien's Cautious Summary of the Situation—Opera War.

Special Cable Despatch to THE SUN.
LONDON, Oct. 1.—John Redmond's utterances during his American money collecting tour are probably attracting more attention here than in the United States, and they certainly do not tend to lessen the embarrasments of the present Government. The truest description of Redmond's home rule issue at the present moment is that it is one of the bugbears of the general political situation in the United Kingdom, like woman suffrage.

Earl Grey's "Federation" scheme, which provides a virtual home rule for Ireland, Scotland, Wales and England, is gaining far more popular support in Ireland than the demands of Redmond and his associates. No sane observer in this country any longer believes that danger remains of the abolition of the second chamber or the substitution of a system which would make the Redmond brand of home rule feasible in the near future.

The evidence has grown overwhelming even in the last few weeks that the popular reaction against the present Government has increased rapidly, so rapidly that a decisive defeat awaits them at the polls unless they are able to bring about another great change in public sentiment before going to the country. William O'Brien expresses a large proportion of Irish public opinion in the following emphatic comment upon Redmond's mission to America as well as upon Redmond himself.

O'BRIEN ON REDMOND.
"Every dollar Redmond brings home will have been obtained by false pretences. The whole of the funds O'Connor secured last November were employed not in advancing home rule but in trying to kill off home rule in making war on me and on old and tried patriots such as Timothy Healy. And why? Because we protest against the predatory budget, because having just obtained our lands for our own people we object to Lloyd George's schemes of land nationalization because the Lords having done their best to kill the budget, moral and political alike bar us from this mad Radical endeavor to destroy the second chamber."

"Better, far better, leave legislation at Washington to an unelected House of Representatives than leave us here to seethe in socialism. The Wyndham land act transformed Ireland. It had transferred within six years half the land of the country to peasants. It was working magnificently. Therefore Redmond deliberately concurs in its destruction. This Government having killed it passes a new land act, and land purchase is dead to-day."

"The sales under the Wyndham act had reached $100,000,000 for a single year. The last eight months they are less than half a million of dollars. Redmond may bamboozle the people of America as to the incidence of the budget, he may make black appear white, that is the politician's art; but no one can explain away the ghastly significance of these figures."

SOCIALISM OR FEDERALISM?
"What then has Redmond for his position as leader? For holding the balance of power in Parliament? Land purchase is dead. The budget, which has driven every freeholder to revolt in England and Ireland and which makes inevitable an overwhelming Tory reaction at the next general election, and a disgraceful measure manipulated by O'Connor before the elected representatives of the honest, decent Irish peasants and the tail end of a group of Socialist members of Parliament who advocate the most extreme measures of continental anti-capitalism."

"Spend your good American dollars on this party of Molly Maguires and it is true you may keep O'Connor in Parliament, for he depends on Socialist votes for his seat for Liverpool, but you will drive every honest man out of the Irish party."

"The platform of our All for Ireland League is conciliation. With the completion of land transfer all else will follow. What we want now is toleration for class and creed. We can have to-morrow that form of home rule which Earl Grey came over from Canada this summer to inculcate upon the Federal Parliament, viz. legislative powers for England, Ireland and Scotland. That is in our power to secure and without delay."

"The Federal conception of home rule spreads like a prairie fire, but all this wild talk of Redmond about 'smashing the Lords' has alienated the sympathy and support of all that class on whose assistance we must rely. Let us accept Earl Grey's federal scheme, Ireland to have the same State rights that Ohio enjoys."

OPERA WAR.
Going to the illness of Miss Marguerite Lemon, the American soprano, who was to have appeared as Maria in the production of "Tiefland" to-night, the opening of Mr. Beecham's opera season at the Grand Garden Theatre has been postponed until Monday.

Musical London is rejoicing in the prospect of an opera war more strenuous than the liveliest phases of the long rivalry between the Metropolitan and the Lyric in New York. Musical London is rejoicing in the prospect of a clash of harmony in London, with this difference, that the English public at the present stage of its education cannot be seduced to support two, much less three, rival impresarios.

An announcement that Mr. Hammerstein would soon lay the cornerstone of a new opera house on a splendid site at the corner of Aldwych and Kingsway, has started a splendid flight of ambition. Thomas Beecham, whose efforts to produce opera in his last year at the Lyric and His Majesty's theatres have achieved a considerable degree of success, has entered into negotiations for the purchase of Devonshire House in Piccadilly, the most ideal site in London.

The plan includes the erection of a modern opera house as well as a restaurant with beautiful gardens. The corner of the present mansion. The plan to predispose opera-goers to the style of classical music by a good dinner served in a sumptuous hall or under a trellis on the lines of the famous restaurant of Paris. The cost of the scheme is estimated at $1,000,000.

Failure to secure Devonshire House, which is considered the most desirable location for a palace of music, has taken an interest in Mr. Burdett-Coutts's property

RUSSIA ON THE RISING WAVE

HAS A HUNDRED MILLIONS TO SPARE THIS YEAR.

Warning to Austro-German-Young Turk Combine—Germany Laying Plans to Attack France's Determined Foreign Minister—A Turkish Collapse Near.

Special Cable Despatch to THE SUN.
ST. PETERSBURG, Oct. 1.—Grand Vizier Hakkı Pasha's quest for gold for Turkey has provoked from Finance Minister Kokovtzeff a categorical declaration that Russia has no intention of raising any foreign or internal loans and that the current financial year promises a surplus of 200,000,000 rubles (about $100,000,000) over the estimated revenue. He says he will not have to go to the banks for the operation of converting Russia's highest interest loan of 5 per cent. into one of 4½ per cent. as this is now practicable because of Russia's improved economic condition.

This declaration is regarded at St. Petersburg as primarily addressed to the financial side of the Austro-German alliance and its Turkish policy. Germany has never ceased to press for a quotation of her securities on the Paris Bourse, which she first sought when she settled amicably the Casablanca incident. There is now a movement in Berlin which is supported by the new Foreign Minister, Baron Kintner-Waechter, to try a fall with M. Pichon, the French Foreign Minister, somewhat similar to that by which the Kaiser and Chancellor von Bismarck engineered the downfall of M. Delcassé over Morocco. M. Pichon has taken a much stronger stand than was expected in resisting the advances upon French capital from quarters which are not politically cooperating with France.

M. Kokovtzeff has let it be known that Russia, which used to take all the money that France had to spare, does not need it any more. To that extent Russia can support the policy of holding France's savings as a weapon in the present European duel. This is regarded as of immediate importance here, where there is a widespread conviction that the present Turkish régime and Young Turkism will collapse into chaos within three months.

Members of the headquarters staff of Russia's southwestern army corps at the Kiev headquarters, are taking leave this autumn.

The remarkable success of Russia's military flying men at the St. Petersburg aviation meeting aroused the enthusiasm of the masses, who never expected to see anything successful done by the men in uniform. Over 100,000 persons were present when Lieut. Rudnev flew for an hour and three-quarters and landed accurately inside a twelve meter circle which had been marked for him. Another officer remained in the air for an hour and a half, while fourteen flew for over half an hour.

HIGHEST FLIGHT TO DATE.
Wynmalen Goes Up Nearly Two Miles, Then Volcanoes to the Earth.

Special Cable Despatch to THE SUN.
MONTMELON LE GRAND, France, Oct. 1.—Aviator Wynmalen broke the altitude record here to-day when he reached a height of 9,171 feet in his biplane. The record previous to to-day's performance was 8,000 feet, it was made by the late George Chaves, who died as the result of injuries in alighting after his flight over the Alps.

Wynmalen would have gone higher, but his petroleum supply gave out and the motor stopped. He was therefore compelled to descend and volplaned to the ground in thirteen minutes without injury to himself or damage to the machine.

Wynmalen is a Dutchman and is 21 years old. The flight was under official control and the record will therefore stand.

The aviator says that after he reached a height of 8,000 feet the cold was intense and his carburetor was frozen.

Hubert Latham is still exercising his Anzani monoplane for the flight at Belmont Park. To-day he made a flight of thirty-five minutes at an average speed of seventy miles an hour.

TANGLED IN MIDAIR.
Aeroplane Mix Up and Drop at Milan Meet. Both Pilots Injured.

Special Cable Despatch to THE SUN.
MILAN, Oct. 1.—During the aviation meeting here Capt. Dickson, an Englishman, and Thomas, a French aviator, collided in the air.

The machines fell to the ground and the official version of the accident says that Dickson's aeroplane was caught on two dangling stays of Thomas's machine while flying underneath the latter. The accident is attributed to the negligence of Thomas. Dickson sustained concussion of the brain. He is not expected to recover.

ETHEL LE NEVE'S FLIGHT.
In Delicate Health; Doctor Fears Strain of Trial Says She'll Kill Herself.

Special Cable Despatch to THE SUN.
LONDON, Oct. 1.—Ethel Le Neve, who is held for trial as an accessory after the fact to the murder of Belle Elmore, the American actress, whose husband, Dr. Hawley Harvey Crippen, is held as her murderer, is in a delicate condition.

The prison doctor fears that if she is placed on trial in her present condition it will have serious effects on her. The unfortunate young woman remains unshaken in her infatuation for Crippen, but declares that if she regains her liberty she will commit suicide.

CANT SQUEEZE SANGUITY OUT.
Queer Imbricatio of Cuban Office Grabbing Snub for the President.

Special Cable Despatch to THE SUN.
HAVANA, Oct. 1.—Secretary of State Sanguity flatly refuses to be transferred to the Department of the Interior, and Francisco Lopez Leiva, Secretary of the Interior, who resigned recently, has consented to remain in office until the elections.

His resignation will be accepted then and he will be appointed inspector of the "Territorial Bank." President Gomez wished Señor Sanguity's place for Señor Paredones, the presidential secretary.

PHOENICIAN VASES STOLEN.
$20,000 Worth, Kept on a Mediterranean Islet, Vanish Mysteriously.

Special Cable Despatch to THE SUN.
ROME, Oct. 1.—A unique collection of Phoenician vases, valued at $20,000, has been mysteriously stolen from the island of San Pantaleo, six miles off Marsala, Sicily.

The islet was an ancient Phoenician emporium. It was purchased in 1907 by a wine merchant of the name of Whitaker, who excavated the city's necropolis and kept his finds on the spot.

AMERICAN ARTISTS TRIUMPH.

Their Exhibits the Success of the Paris Autumn Salon.

Special Cable Despatch to THE SUN.
PARIS, Oct. 1.—The autumn salon's eighth exhibition has opened at the Grand Palais. Although the ceremony of opening was performed by the Minister of Public Instruction this salon has no official position of importance comparable with the old or new salons held in the spring. It generally affords shelter to Matisse and his pupils or imitators, who increase notably each year, and to the school which French critics have christened "Fauves," from hatred of any kind of restraint.

Matisse shows this year two large decorative panels representing dancing and music in which there are lobster red figures, green grounds and indigo skies which the critics remain unanimous in scolding.

The picture space is limited this year, as much room is devoted to an exhibition of furniture by Munich artists, eighteen completely fitted rooms being shown. The authorities of the salon seem anxious to lay stress on this Bavarian art, as distinguished from Prussian art, evidently not wishing to risk the accusation of advertising hereditary enemies.

Model cottage, bookbinding jewel, textile ceramic, porcelain and wickerwork exhibits further decrease the picture space. In these various branches 557 artists exhibit 1,235 works. Thirty-five are Americans, with seventy-one pictures and sculptures. Only two have succeeded in attracting mention in long press citations, Miss Edyth Cockerell of Jersey City, who exhibits two paintings, and Maurice Denis, who shows eight panels for the cupola of the house of Charles Sterns, the banker.

Théobald Simon praises Miss Cockerell's work in the Temps. Thes two exhibits are acclaimed the successes of the salon. The panels are said to be the finest decorative work since that of Puvis de Chavannes.

The exhibition has confirmed the resolution of Paul Boncour, chairman of the Beaux Arts budget committee, to propose that a group part of the money allotted to the State for the purchase of works of pure art, such as paintings and sculptures shall henceforth be spent on new works of decorative art; that is, furniture, hangings and carpets. M. Boncour believes that French decorative art has been undergoing an eclipse, from which it is now emerging, and he is anxious to help in the renaissance.

SIZING UP CANCER RESEARCH.
Work of President Butler in Berlin—Donors of a Remnant of Americans.

Special Cable Despatch to THE SUN.
BERLIN, Oct. 1.—Among the Americans of light and leading who are here for the celebration of the centennial of the University of Berlin is President Nicholas Murray Butler of Columbia University. Dr. Butler is seeing old friends and making new ones. He is taking the opportunity to investigate the state of cancer research in various countries with a view to the avoidance of superfluous repetition by America of work that has already been done in Europe.

The Kaiser will seize the occasion of the centennial celebration to deliver a speech. There is naturally an enormous demand for tickets to the gala, where the first festive act will take place.

Dr. Hill, the American Ambassador, gave a dinner to-day to the Americans who are here in connection with the potash negotiations which are still going on. Mrs. Hill held her first reception of the season on Friday.

The American exodus is almost complete and an American voice is seldom heard, so Unter den Linden and vicinity are assuming the character of a German city.

Monday, October 3rd, a Most Important Sale of Fine Ostrich Willow Plumes

On March 14th of this year, we held a sale of these plumes. It was such an unequalled success, that then and there we decided to repeat it. But it has required all the intervening months to procure a sufficient quantity of Ostrich Willow Plumes of really superior quality, at a price that would enable us to repeat the sale under its former conditions.

We have just 2,000 of these fine Willow Plumes.

In plain black or plain white, also in shaded pink and black, shaded King's blue, and black, or shaded black and white. These are the colors most in demand, and therefore most difficult to obtain even at regular prices.

These 2,000 Plumes, no more, at the following remarkably low prices:

19 in. long, 16 in. wide, value 11.50, at 7.95
24 in. long, 17 in. wide, value 19.50, at 13.50
